The Business Journal of Phoenix

West Valley National Bank has received federal approval to open a branch in downtown Buckeye.

Started in 2006, the independent bank has its lead branch in Avondale as well as and loan production offices in Goodyear and North Scottsdale.

"We are thrilled that our board's dream of becoming Buckeye's hometown bank is about to become a reality," said Candace Wiest, president and CEO of West Valley National Bank.

"Buckeye has been particularly hard hit during this economic downturn and we are anxious to provide working capital to the business community."

West Valley National focuses on the commercial market, particularly small to middle-size businesses and the commercial real estate, development and construction industries.
